Processing of your personal data

We will not process any personal data collected through this website unless we have first told you that we are going to do so or it is obvious how we will use it.

We may collect information about the software on your computer (your browser version etc.) and your IP address (your connection with the internet) in order to improve your interaction with this website and for our records. This may happen automatically without your being aware of it.

We may use cookies (small text files which we and other website operators store on your computer when you visit our websites) to deliver a better and more personalised interaction. They enable us to recognise you when you return to this site, store information about your preferences, and improve the way your searches are processed. They also enable us to generate statistics about the number of visitors we have and how they use our website and the internet. You can set your browser to reject our cookies if you wish (you should consult your browser help section for details), but this might restrict your use of this and other websites.

Disclosure of your personal data

We will not sell your personal data other than as part of a sale of a substantial part of the School's assets. We may disclose it to a prospective purchaser, but only for use in connection with that sale. We may also disclose it to a third party if we have a legal obligation to do so and we have not voluntarily assumed that obligation.

Your statutory rights

You have a right to ask us not to process your personal data for direct marketing purposes.

There will normally be a VAT-inclusive fee, currently £10 per subject access request. The exact amount will depend on the nature and quantity of the information. You have a right to ask us not to make decisions based solely on the automatic processing of your personal data if those decisions affect you to a significant degree.
